Official Group and Classroom Kit

Improve the lives of war-traumatized children by practicing for peace.

Thank you for your interest in Practice for Peace!

This is a kit to help you and your classroom or group join in a worldwide effort to replace sounds of war and hate with sounds of music.

STEP 1: Make copies of the Program Overview, the Pledge Form, and a Daily Practice Log in this kit for each person in your group.

STEP 2: Introduce your group to the Shropshire Music Foundation and the Practice for Peace program by reviewing the Foundation Overview and/or downloading and showing the video on www.practiceforpeace.org. The flier at the end of this kit can be used to spread awareness about the program. To get a Microsoft Word version of the poster that you can customize yourself, just email info@shropshirefoundation.org.

STEP 3: Select an official month for your group to dedicate to the program. Send your group out to find sponsors (family, friends, neighbors, businesses) who will pledge a certain amount for each minute of practice during that selected month. Suggested amounts—pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters. Or, sponsors can also choose to give one fixed amount instead.

STEP 4: Have each person record practice minutes daily during the month on the Daily Practice Log.

STEP 5: Have each person tally up his or her practicing minutes and collect their pledges after the month is complete.

STEP 6: Collect all the pledges from each member of your group.

STEP 7: Fill out the Group Donation Form and mail it along with all of the pledge money to:

Foundation Overview

What is the Shropshire Music Foundation?

The Shropshire Music Foundation is a non-profit, grassroots organization committed to helping children in war-traumatized countries through music education and performance. Its mission is to redress psychosocial trauma, advance emotional health, develop scholastic achievement, foster ethnic tolerance, promote peace, and improve the quality of life for war-affected children and adolescents. The organization has reached more than 10,000 children in countries such as Kosovo, Northern Ireland, and Uganda.

Why is this important?

Every night, children in Kosovo wake up screaming from hellish nightmares about men with guns. Every day, Protestant and Catholic kids in Northern Ireland cautiously play in segregated communities, always fearing an outburst of sectarian violence. Every evening, Ugandan boys and girls trek to urban shelters where they huddle together to evade being kidnapped and forced into becoming child soldiers.

Many of the children the Foundation works with are emotionally broken. They act out atrocities in their play and have very little self-esteem. If they are not cared for, they will likely grow up to participate in the violence they have seen. The Shropshire Foundation provides relief and healing to these children through participation in music education and performance. The program has been recognized by UNICEF as "making a significant contribution" to the international relief community. The Foundation has been implementing recommendations issued by the United Nations and UNICEF in their report on the "Impact of Armed Conflict on Children" (1996).

How will my contribution help?

One hundred percent of the money raised will go straight to the Foundation's programs. These donations help supply instruments, materials, school supplies, transportation and instruction for each classroom of eager children.
